This book is a biography of Ephraim Udo Jacob, a chemist by training and fourth president of the Ngwa National Association, USA (NNAUSA). The book is more than a biography. It is the story of NNAUSA itself. It is also a history of Ngwa land of South-Eastern Nigeria. From the inspiring and captivating story of one man who was born to a blind man, it is easy to read about the culture of the Igbo of Southeastern Nigeria, their major institutions, mythology, value system and overall way of life. It is one book that has something for everyone - the young, the immigrant, the old and the religious, to mention only a few. It is the story of perseverance and, eventually, of triumph from over poverty. Udo's philosophy of life, hard work and eventually climb from grass to grace will inspire millions of young people across the world who find themselves coming from a humble background to pursue a dream of a good life in America.
